GENERAL REMARKS,
The principle of co-operative security is The principle of co-operative associations has now stood the test for upwards of a quarter of a contury, has been applied to an almost endless variety of purposes; and the testimony to its success has been as unvaried as its applica-tion has been universal.

applied to an almost endless variety of purposes; and the testimony to its success has been as unvaried as its application has been universal.

The first attempt to apply this principle to the division of profits upon the production and exchange of commodities by means of a co-operative store, was made in Rochdale in 1844, and the marvellous results of that enterprise have led to the establishment of similar institutions, not only in many of the manufacturing and commercial towns of Great Britain, but throughout France, Germany, and other parts of the continent of Europe, and in the United States of America.

Encouraged by the success that has attended the experiment, the Civil Service of England in 1886 opened a store in Lendon, and since that period aumerous branch establishments have been formed. These have been worked with the greatest advantage to the members, a saving of from fifteen to twenty per cent. having been effected by the purchasers.

In the appendix attached to the copies of this prospectus, which have been distributed, will be found extracts on this subject, showing the achieved and probable future results of co-operative organisations similar to that herein proposed.

TO COUNTRY AGENTS. — The Agents for the Sydney Mornino Herald are requested to furnish their quarterly statement of accounts previous to the 20th instant. March, 1871.

The Sydney Morning Berald.

SATURDAY, MARCH 18, 1871.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday,
Mr. Samuel brought up a report from the Select Committee on the Marine Board Bill.
On the motion of Mr. G. A. JLOVD, the accounts current respecting the appropriation of £3000 and £10,000 drawn from the Oriental Bank by Messrs.
Iloyd, Bellby, and Co., were ordered to be laid on the table.
On the motion of Mr. Bawden, papers relating to the appointment of police magistrate at Grafton and Casino were ordered to be laid on the table.
Mr. Allen moved the second reading of the St.
Andrew's Parsonage Sale Bill.
Mr. Stramt moved the adjournment of the second reading to this day week. This was negatived by the casting to the Speaker, the numbers being 10 to 10.

to 10.

After some discussion, and after several attempts to count out the House, the second reading was cerried without division. The first clause was much opposed, and ultimately progress was reported, and leave given to sit sgain that day formight.

Mr. Posstru moved the postpouement of the second reading of the Religious Opinions Bill for a week but some discussion arising, the House was counted out at twenty-five minutes to 6, and was adjourned by the Spraken to Tuesday next.

Ir is said in the Assembly that the internal improvement of the country demands in every-thing the interference of the Central Government; that unless by this meddling in innumerable concerns, which however corrupt the Parliament and absorb the revenue, we should sink into barbarism. America was quoted in opposition to this view. But municipal institutions accompany the people wherever they go, and are immediately brought into action. We are, indeed, told that the condition of America is different from our own, because it has a much larger population. But as soon as the first colony was planted in America municipal institutions were established. Every State, province, and township managed its own affairs The immense proportion of money, at least up to the late war, which was collected from the people, was spent by themselves in the erection of public works, and more than all in the edu-

But the fact is, the question of municipal government is not chiefly one of money. It is whether we are to have an honest policy in Government-whether we are to have me spirit in the management of municipa affairs—whether we are to have any check upon the corruption which hands from the central treasury the money collected for general purposes to persons favoured by Ministers of the day—or whether we are to have money spent on public works desired by a district collected in that district. Unless municipal government is extended, Parliamentary government will soon become Parliamentary government will soon become impossible, since its cost will exceed the taxation, however unscrupulous may be the fiscal policy of the Government. The worst effect of the present system is that fiscal policy of the Government. The worst effect of the present system is that all public spirit is liable to extinction.
We are carried on for a time by our old ideas, cherished by the ancient principles of the nation. But these are continually undermined, especially in a new generation, by the scandalous scheme of looking to Government for everything, and making every man more con-spicuous than the rest only a parasite or a schemer. It is, indeed, more convenient for the Ministry to have money to spend in ex change for place and power, though this in its operation causes a great waste of public money, and inflicts great injury upon certain portions to the advantage of the rest.

This evil is the more deplorable since it does not terminate in itself. It has been justly said by an eminent colonist that the corrupt system of government introduced, and the profligate expenditure which has followed it, have made sound fiscal laws all but impossible in this colony. We are continually reminded that we must submit to burdensome taxation because Government cannot carry on without more money. This anxiety for more money is founded not in the absolute wants of the country, but in the necessity of having means by which party may be kept together. Thus the Assembly is debased by a pernicious stituencies are made to separate their interests entirely from those of their fellow-colonists, and merely to look to the power of their representatives to obtain some unfair advantage at the expense of all the rest. Where a at the expense of all the rest. Where a system of this kind is continued for a few years at must debase the character of the people. The rising generation, growing up under the impression that it is the true end of political government, will not only take the he idea that there is any other possible.

This system has continued in France for many years. The prefects, being the agents of Government, bribed and even intimidated the voters with the promise of the favour or the threat of the displeasure of the central Government. The language of the central Government. The language commonly held was, if you vote for the EMPEROR you will have a bridge or a church, or some other object of local ambition. Individually you will, beside this, gain what it is in the power of the Government to bestow. If not, you will be excluded from all the advantages connected with the distribution of Government waster. with the distribution of Government support. consequence of this system continued through a generation—that the political life of the people was destroyed. They felt that principles were an incumbrance—that to belong to the Opposition party would be suicide. They therefore voted in mass, almost with unanimity, so long as it served their purpose. The plebiscite of May last, which gave the EMPEROR almost a unanimous vote, was but an expression of the extinction of political life, for such unanimity never actually existed in the world.

Where healthy action is vigorous, parties ar not only distinct and well defined, but they are permanent, and look to the people rather than to the Executive Government. When the multitudes of voters whose incomes are at the mercy of the Government of the day, we may perhaps feel that there is some reason to be thankful even for the ballot as the only means by which a man is often preserved from being a martyr or a slave.

Any party hereafter formed with the view of the government of this country should come forth distinctly upon the principle of muni-cipal action in local affairs. No doubt, strong opposition will be found to exist in some districts, but the people of the metropolis must throw off the incubus that ruins them by extravagant debt and extravagant taxation. A very small number of people send a member to the Assembly. His vote tells against the thousands of the metropolis. So long as the vote of a member was used for the common interests of the country it seemed but reasonable that there should be this inequality reasonable that there should be this inequality of representation to compensate for distance. But if we are to have paid members, and are to pack the Assembly with persons who are the mere agents of their particular neighbourhood, it will be requisite that precaution should be taken against every undue preponderance by civing covery to the large constituencies. giving power to the larger constituencies, according to their numbers, to protect themgiving power to selves. The new doctrine that the country is benefited by fresh taxation—that interests are to revive through the increasing burdens of the people—is indeed an old and abandoned theory which the experience of statesmen has taught them to reject, and even to abhor. It is cesentially dishonest, and is an attempt to impose upon the people at large a burden for the benefit of a comparatively small and rapacious section of producers. All these taxes which are aggravated for this purpose are so

THE debate on the proposal to tax breadstuffs has, on the whole, drawn out from hon. members more argument than any other part of the financial policy. This may perhaps be due to the fact that it is now for the first time to the fact that it is now for the first time proposed by any Government; and the unwillingness of Parliament to submit readily to the innovation is shown by the fact that the Government, though able to keep a majority on most other occasions, has been totally left in the lurch on this. As the question will again come under discussion, it may be worth while to review the bearing of the arguments adduced, and trace how far they reat on discussion. adduced, and trace how far they rest on dis-puted principles, and how far on disputed Between the theoretical protectionist and the theoretical freetrader, there can of course be no accord; and there were some hon. members who took no further pains than to classify the tax under one heading or the other. To win the favour of some it was tection—to secure the condemnation of others it was enough that the abolition of the Corn Laws was associated with the triumph of free trade. Yet no adequate proof was furnished that the farmer would really benefit by the tax, while the arguments against the English Corn Law do not exactly apply to the case of the proposed tax. Very different things often pass under the same name.

The miller who imports wheat to grind and re-export would certainly be checkmated by a tax of ninepence a bushel. It is also true that the import of wheat and flour is fairly balanced the import of wheat and flour is fairly balanced by an export of coal. But then a shipload of the latter is very inferior in value to one of the former, and the import of breadstuffs is likely to cease in a year or two from the increase of agriculture, altogether apart from the effect of a tax. The duty on flour would not affect the re-export trade, as it is an article easily kept in bond, and that does not provide upmacking and handling. The not require unpacking and handling. The miller would be touched by the duty on wheat, but not the mere merchant. The biscuit manufacturer would be unfavourably affected by the tax, because he works the imported Adelaide flour up into an exportable article, and in selling that article to ships, and for export generally, he has to compete with the producers of the world. world.

But though it is clear that some might suffer, is it as clear that if anybody gained, it would be the farmer? We must take note of facts as well as of dry theories, and what are facts as well as of dry theories, and what are the facts? The colony is rapidly approaching the time when it will produce its own breadstuffs. This condition, so long desired, would have been reached this year but for an unfavourable season. Owing to the unusual weather, there will be a deficiency of about 30,000 tons. But this demand exists mainly for the city, and the parts supplied immediately from the city. The grain-growing districts supply their own wants and those of the pastoral country behind them. The country has little or no surplus to send to town, but on the other hand it has little or no deficit requiring it to draw from Sydney. The requiring it to draw from Sydney. The imported flour will not be sent to the interior to compete with the local grower; the local grower will send little or none to Sydney to compete with the importer. Practically there will be two separate markets supplied from two separate sources. Under these circumstances, will the imposition of a tax on the metropolitan consumption affect the relation between the supply and demand in the interior? This argument was used by an hon, member to prove that this tax could not be oppressive, inasmuch as all over the country the working man would not observe any increase in the price of the loaf. But this argument admits that the price might be raised to the consumer of the imported flour, and therefore the tax would fall on one part of the community and not on another part. It was, however, denied by several members that the tax would raise the price of bread anywhere. Nothing less than a rise of fifty shillings a ton in flour, it was stated, would add a halfpenny to the cost of the loaf, and that so light a tax as £1 would really be borne either by the importer, or the miller, or the baker, or distributed amongst the three. This assertion was disputed by some familiar with the trade. The tendency of the tax is certainly towards the consumer, though that tendency may for a time be checked by other forces. But supposing the statement to be correct, it is equivalent to saying that £30,000 should be levied from three classes of people, and these condemned classes would, in all probability, complain of this as unjust and greatly prefer a direct license tax. would fall on one part of the community greatly prefer a direct license tax. f we should have a very d season in which the crops were so short that the country districts could not supply their own wants, then it is quite certain that the tax would raise the price of wheat in the interior, and farmers who could afford to hold their grain, and were not in debt to the storekeeper or under advance to the miller, would certainly hold on and get the advantage of the market. What proportion of the growers are financially free enough not to be compelled to sell at the lew prices which generally prevail immediately after harvest, we have no means of ascertaining, as very conflicting statements are made with respect to the financial condition of the free selectors. A tax that would only put profits into the hands of middlemen would not be considered as operating satisfactoril even by a protectionist. If we should have a very good harvest ner If we should have a very good harvest next year, and should not want to import at all, then the tax will not have any effect in raising the price. This uncertainty as to our production was fairly used as an argument against the duty looked at in the light of a revenue tax. Every TREASURER likes to be able to calculate his forthcoming income as closely as possible, and a tax which may produce £30,000 this year and nothing next year, is not one which can be recommended as adapted to pay a fixed interest on debentures.

One protection argument employed was that as every article the farmer used was taxed, it was only fair that the commodity he produced should be taxed also. But the gold-miners and coal-miners have everything taxed as much as the farmers, and it is not possible to increase their profits or their wages by taxing their commodities, which are raised mainly for import. From the nature of the case we cannot give protection all round, and to protect one set of people only would be invidious unless we can give very strong social reasons why it is for the good of all that that class should be specially favoured. Moreover, many schemes for abstracting money under false pretences. But we repeat that it is not the spoliation which is principally to be lamented; it is the creation of permanent interests antagonistic to the general welfare, and it is in raising by any means a revenue bonus at starting to the conditional pur-chaser; and some injury to the pastoral inter-est has been submitted to, in order that the corn-grower might have the pick of the best lands at easy rates and without com-petition. The Railway Department, too, by bringing down wheat at rates which, according to the official accounts, harely may the actual costs of transaccording to the official accounts, barely pay the actual cost of transit, and which are lower than the cost of sending flour up country, establishes a differential tariff, and thereby gives a lift to the local producer. With these two little bits of protection a very clear and the local producers.

of protection a very clear case ought to be made out to justify the demand for a third. At the same time the supporters of the tax are undoubtedly right in arguing that to raise any considerable revenue through the Customs the articles taxed must be those Customs the articles taxed must be those of common consumption. Taxes on mere luxuries will never raise a large revenue. In this respect the tax on flour stands on the same footing with the tax on tea, though it is hard to understand the consistency of those who, objecting to the former in the interests of the poor man, support the latter. It is also true that flour like teasures because leaves the same former in the latter. support the latter. It is also true that flour, like tea, enters largely into rations, and that, to that extent therefore, the tax would fall on the employer, and net on the employed. But it is not like tea in this respect, namely, that it is complicated with the question of protection. Tea is not an article of local production, and therefore every pound consumed must pay the tax. Flour is an article of local production, and only a portion of what is consumed pays the tax. If the duty should have the effect of raising the price of the local product, then to that extent the consumer pays without the revenue being benefited. This, of without the revenue being benefited. This, of course, is ground for satisfaction to the protectionist, inasmuch as the consumer of the local article is compelled to contribute towards the profits of the local producer; but it must be matter of regret to the statesman who declares that he puts on the tax solely for the purposes of revenue, and who must be sorry to injure some of the people without doing any corresponding good to the Treasury.

Nor is it sound to object to the tax because it falls are object to the tax because it falls.

cause it falls on an article of food, for every other article of food that is imported is taxed. But bread is not improperly called the staff of life, and stands on a different foot ing to the other articles of diet. Other edibles may be more or less of luxuries, bat the loaf can hardly be put in that category.

THE FORTIFICATIONS,-Several of the gun were yesterday taken down and mounted on the fortifica-tions at the entrance of the harbour. Those for George's and Middle Heads batteries were drawn from the North Shore, whither they had been taken the previous day. The operations were performed under the supervision of Sir James Martin and Lieutenant-Colonel Richardson. We believe it is intended shortly to have a public holids for the purpose of getting the Volunteers together to ma the batteries and take up positions, and so test the time is which it can be done from the moment when the alarm is given of an enemy being off the coast.

MAGISTERIAL ORDERS FOR IMPRISONMENT. MAGISTERIAL ORDERS FOR IMPRISONMENT.—
There was some discussion in the Supreme Court yesteeday as to the legality of the ordinary practice at the Police Courts of ordering levy and distress and imprisonment for default, in one breath, in case where the ponalties are made answerable by levy and distress; and where imprisonment for a definite period, or until a penalty be paid, is used an alternative only when there is no payment and no goods can be found to levy upon. The opinion on the Bench and at the Bar appeared to be that this practice was clearly illegal, and at the Dar appeared to be that this practice was clearly illegal, and that no sentence of imprisonment ought to be pasted until there had been some actual effort made to recover, by levy and distress, the amount ordered to be paid, and a return or statement had been made to the convicting Justices in the nature of the Sheriff's return of "nullabona" (i. s., that no effects could be found), for that the defendant, where called upon to show cause why he should not be imprisoned, might be able to point out effects to be levied upon.

Co-operative Society.—We are informed that certain members of the Civil Service propose to catabilia a co-operative society for the sale of every article of demestic consumption. Each member is to furnish a small shount of capital—we believe only a few shillings—in order to provide for the first expenses. Everything is to be bought for ready money, and to be sold for ready money only. It is expected that by this means all the intermediate profits will secret to the advantage of the sharehelders. The society is to be open to all who choose to join, and it is said, that from the calculations made, a very large per centage will be saved in the purchase of the articles to be sold. Several such societies in England have continued for a long time until they have grown into great mercantile firms. There is always, however, a danger least the management should be unskilful or dishonest, and this will require constant vigilance in those who are interested.

THE DISPUTE ABOUT THE TOWN PLATE.—
The Melbourne dryns says:—It seems that the protest entered by Mr. Lang against the rider of Tim Whiffler in the Town Plate on Saturday last is likely to give some work to the lawyers. Mr. Hoskins, not being satisfied with the decision of the stewards of the Victoria Racing Club, has obtained the opinion of counsel, and, it is said, intends commencing an astion against the stewards for the recovery of the stakes. The general opinion of all racing men is that Mr. Hoskins is very ill-advised in seeking to upset the decision. The race was fairly won by Tim Whiffler, and no one was in a better position to judge of the alleged cross than the persons in the stewards box. The decision was quite in accordance with the opinions of all racing men who saw the race, even those who lost mency on the event declaring themselves quite satisfied with the decision of the stewards.

Mr. Frank Hussey.—An order was tande

Mr. Frank Hyssey.—An order was made yesterday, in Chambers, by Mr. Justice Hargrave, for the discharge of Mr. Frank Hussey, the well-known representative of negro humour, who was in custody under a writ of or re, at the instance of the A. Highly recommended by the faculty as the most nutritious and easily digosted food for infants, oblidren, and

This was a motion to set aside an award made on a eference to arbitration by order of the Minister for Landa, ander the provisions of the Crown Lands Occupation Act of reference to arbitration by order of the Minister for Lands, under the provisions of the Crown Lands Occupation Act of 1861.

The Attorney-General and Mr. M. Stephen appeared in support of the motion; and Sir William Manning, Q.C., in apport of the award.

The point raised had reference to the reception, in oridence, by the arbitrators of a station return beyeared under one of the old Lands Acts. It was assumed for the purposes of the present proceeding that this return had been admitted by the arbitrators after argument. It was further assumed that, on an ordinary reference to arbitration, the document in question would have been properly receivable. The substantial question was, whether man arbitration under the Crown Lands Occupation Act of 1861—which was compulsory on the parties when the matters in difference could not be otherwise determined—the proceedings could be conducted in the same manner as on an reference to arbitration at his prins? Or whether the proceedings should be governed by the more strict rules of law, as to the reception of evidence, &c.?

Their Hoxons, without calling upon Sir William Manning, held that the proceedings as a reference to arbitration under the Crown Lands Occupation Act of 1891 were not to be subject to any other or more stringent rules than ordinary references. The motion was therefore dismissed with costs.

assignee of the estate of Charles Baker; or such aum of citté de. Id. less any amount of taxed costs which might be found due to the said A. H. M'Calloch as attorney for the said official assignee.

Mr. Darley appeared in support of the motion, and Mr. M. H. Stephen showed cause against it.

There was no question as to the payment of the money for Mr. M'Culloch, or as to such money having been paid to him as attorney for the official assignee. The resiccutest in the case was, whether Mr. M'Culloch had a right to set off other claims which he might have on Mr. Sempill in respect of other professional business done for he latter against the receipt of this money, and to retain such money on account of such other claims, inatead of paying it over for the hencest of the creditors of Uharles Baker's estate. Mr. M'Culloch had formerly been Mr. Sempill's adictior, but had coased to be so for the last three years, except in reference to some old estate-wherein there were some matters still undisposed of. According to Mr. Sempill's shell be a such as a such as a strengement, but it was contended that the accounts as to each estate in relation to which any such service had been rendered, should be kept separate and distinct. Mr. M'Culloch did not admit that there had been such an arrangement but it was contended that this could not affect the case; for as the autorney was employed by the official assignee of the estate, in such assignee's official capacity, and had received the money for any claims not connected with the estato itself, even if there had been no special agreement for the keeping of the trust accounts distinct. In opposition to the application it was contended that the retainer of Mr. M'Culloch by Mr. Sempill being of a general character for the various matters in which Mr. Sempill was concerned, and for the besett of the latter, there would be a lien on any unoney counting into the hands of M'Culloch on account of the business done for Sempill, but nothing turned upon this fact.

BERGORE Mr. District Court Judge Down.

ADAMS V. PRITIT.

This was an action to recover £4 14s. 6d., amount of sistency's fees alleged to be due to plaintiff for professional services rendered in a unit in which defendant was concerned. Defendant pleaded not indebted, and contradicted plaintiff's statement that he engaged him to act on his behalf in the case as attorrey in obtaining and examining wittenses and bringing the action before the Court. The sistence engaged, according to defendant, was Mr. Smith. District Court agent. His Honor did not see how plaintiff was entitled to recover, and gave a verifict to defendant, with costs of one winess.

Plaintiff brought ARTER V. DUDLEY.

Plaintiff brought his action to recover £10 upon a choque plaintiff was instructed not to be such as a customer of Mr. Yorke, and behalf, and to go beyond a customer of Mr. Yorke, and plaintiff was instructed not to go beyond a mount beyond the sum to what defendant was to be restricted. Plaintiff plaif £10 to his employer in 1855 on defendant's behalf, and the latter about the daste the money was pid gave a cheque for the smouth. He, however, had no document showing that the money had been polid to Mr. Yorke, or when it had been paid, but defendant had sanctioned the payment on his behalf. The defence set up was in effect that the theque was given to plaintiff as clerk for Mr. Yorke on mecount of defendants father, George Dudley, jum. Defendant never had any business with Mr. Yorke, and the cheque was paid to Carter for Mr. Yorke on behalf of his (defendant) father, whose name was over the door, and it was the father who had transactions with Mr. Yorke for the supply of meat. Defendant further stated that plaintiff never informed him that Yorke had instructed him (plaintiff) not to let people have more than a cortain quantity of good on credit. After hearing counsel, his floor considered that upon the belance of testiuonty the plaintiff would have to take the money paid to the paid floor on w

"Fir.—Having of late often been asked particulars about assisted emigration to the colony of Queensland by a number of assisted emigrants from North Germany and Scandinavia, now going out, through the agency of L. Knorr and Co., in Hamburg, to Queensland, I very much desire some information connected therwrith; and knowing your office to be a reliable source from whence to obtain it, I take the liberty to ask such favour. It is chiefly with regul to the manner in which the colonial Government propose to collect the advanced passager-money, if agreement for labour at fixed rates can be made here, by whom and how; or such information that may serve for reference and guarantee for intending emigrants. Some rival agencies, for liners to the United States and other parts, are here trying to put the colony and the colonial Government in a quastionable light by insertions in the daily papers, and thus frighten people in order to further their own interests. It is, for instance, asserted by them, and on the whole a protty general belief, that the Government of Queenaland will exact repayment by compulsory labour. As people here have but a very imperfect knowledge of Queenaland or the whole Australias, they are easily exact or made to believe. I take the liberty to state that I am personally tolerably well acquainted with colonial matters, having been a resident in Australia for twelve years, and only lately returned; also, that I am not connected with any emigration, but only take a colonial's interest in the matter, had wish to serve those of my countrymen with advice who intend to emigrate. As direct information from your office will be the best autherity, I hope, Sir, that you will kindly favour me with an answer, if it can be conveniently done.—Yours, &c.,

REDFERN.—The usual fortnightly meeting of Council was held in the Municipal Chambers, Pitt-street, on Friday, the 10th Instant, Present—the Mayor (Mr. George Renwick) and a full Council. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. The chairman of the Finance Committee brought up a report recommending payment of accounts amounting to £41 5s. Id., which, on the motion of Aldermen Williamson and Spence, was adopted, and payment ordered. The report of the Improvement Committee of the 3rd instant was brought up recommending the acceptance of the following tenders:—1st, Edupurd Mason's, for printing; 2nd, James White's, for supplying ballast, and for extrage; 3rd, Daniel Carroll's for cleaning guiters. TO THE RIPTOR OF THE REALD.

Sin.—There is something fearfully ominous in the apathy of a people—"is sittle more along, a little more along a little more folding of the hands, and bending of the back to the smirt." The stuper of degradation has seized the colony, and the apirt of seridom will have it cowering under his fold daring ignorance aits broading over her, hatching mischine and forging festers to enchain her freedom, e'er the clanking iros shall have cut into her soul and roused the spirit to a desperate and heading rush for diliverance; gaant misery will stalk abroad with a withering emile, pointing his fineer of scorn at the down-trodden; poverty, idleress, cold-hearted selfishness, scrambling for a skeder of tastence; men looking with a hopeless vacancy into your face, as indeed they do now, putting the question—What caustence; with our sons? What as glorious inheritance this colony is to the handful of people who have settled in it, and what advantage of position have they not got! Nature proclaims her sovereignty. A feeling of shame ought to cover us, that we have proved unworthy of the trust committed to us, that we have not improved the talents so liberally awanded, but have guie, and are going yet more, to bury our Lord's money until some one shall arise to spura the triflers. It is said to think we are so fallen, the car of Juggernaut is being diven over our necks, and but for the camest and apparently almost unheeded cry of the Morning Herald, and a few onvulsive heavings amongst the cames and apparently almost unheaving. What are the people doing? Heatheaphi gone from them, are they foreshen by that philosophy of common sense which, throwing sophistry to the winds, would, if we would but open our understandings, teach us the trusty of the surface, dealing out her abundance to all neighbouring States, said acropping and cramped, while enemies in the guise of friends are forging additional feturs.

welcoming the stranger to our shores, dealing out her abundance to all neighbouring States, sits drooping and cramped, while enemies in the guise of friends are forging additional fetters.

While our rulers cry "Money, money, give us money—we have spent all that you allowed us and more, give, give that we may cover our sins," trade languishes: the tree of life under which the people should have sat rejoicing is supped at the root, while parasites devour its branches; the heart of the people fails them, their revenues and respures are dried up; many cry for bread, and there is nose.

Tools to be used for our purpose, says the sporter—throw dust in their eyes, tell them that while they slumber we will rob them and they shall not know it; forge more fetters, handcuff the nation, so that the people shall not deal with each other, or come to know good from evil; keep them quiet and we will squeeze them. Oil is squeezed from mutton hirds, why not money from men? We will sat overything they eat, everything they drink, everything they war; while they live they shall pay us money, money, money, money.

Is there no life left that the arm of rebellion against the frathields is not raised? What is it that he means? Evidently he saks for an average of the per cent. of import duty, to be just through the Custom House for State purposes. The people do not appear to comprehend what that means—arithmetic will tell us. Granied that the import merchant pay- £10 to Government for every £100 worth of goods which be lands, he must calculate that the people do not appear to comprehend what the people do not appear to comprehend what the people do not appear to comprehend what the most merchant pays £10 to Government for every £100 worth of goods which he lands, he must calculate that the goods cost him £110, and when he sells them to the setall dealer has must charge a profit upon the days as part of the cost of the goods, and so in like manner the retail dealer mast charge a profit upon the price he pays, and thus it comes that the consumer will have to pay 10 per cent. more for what he uses in order that Government may got 10 per cent. Fifteen per cent., that is three shiftings out of every pound of his wages, will the workman have to pay, the clerk have to pay, will everybody have to pay, for what they eat, or drink, or wear, to our most wise and beneficent rukers. The proportion is monstrous. How would it have been regarded had Government submitted a measure to impose a direct income tax of 16 per cent, and in return for that to leave the people free to go and do what business they could honestly at any time or anywhere? The amount while have been hoted; but surely there can be no man who would not esteem the latter proposal as a benefit, or who foels that his business would be improved by being restricted. Such a measure would have been a boon compared with the tariil and financial policy which threaten us. What does the spirit of our present legislation say? Put an out for the period of your steamers—proclaim your steam comparies bankrupt. The boundaries of New Bouth Wales are set—thither may ye go, and no further; trade amongst your seteres as ye life, but ge shall pay to so a tex which shall clog your wheels, and shortly empower your merchants to discharge half of those who now labour for them—porters, clerks, merchants, shipping, trade, commerce—down with them all—cumberers of the ground. Only let us put the sharkles of our proposed tariff upon you now, and we shall squezze you so that ye shall not know the hand that does it. Ye may pine and di

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALIS.

SIE,—It would suggest itself that the reports of a Hilbustering expedition would have roused the Government to the accessity of completing the local force that has been in contemplation so many months, if only to take charge of the guns now being mounted, and which would otherwise have remained (but for the courtery of Commodore Sthling) as perches for sea-fowl, or frowning statues of a non-combatant Government, entirely ignorant of military matters, who lead the country into expenses for guns and fortifications, without even the sign of a man to work them, except when a passing war vessel can be persuaded to assist a country perfectly capable of defending itself, had they any one at the head of affairs capable of organising a proper force. The fact is, those in the pay of the Government, and perhaps capable, at present are afraid to assume too much; and those who have the power are unable, from incompetency, to carry it out? Another point I beg to submit which may be considered an injustice; many gentlemen who have applied for military appointments, who have handed ever their testimonials, are restained from obtaining any increase to their incomes, and unable to enter on any other pursuit or employment, as by withdrawing their testimonials they would lose the small chance they might have, after waiting for months, or

The shipments by the two first-named vessels are included in the statistics received by the mail which give the value of the month's exports to Sydney as £231,200. Besides these the Englebert and Isle of France from Mauritius, and Elderslie from Java, brought sugars, and the Memento, from Dunedin, has a portion of criginal cargo from Hongkong, including 5755 criginal cargo from Hongkong, including 5755 bags of rice. Since the receipt of the mail telegram, on Tuesday morning, there has been nothing done in the import markets except the sale by auction of a portion of the Odalisk's cargo of sugar, when indications of easier rates were perceptible. Several shipments of South Australian breadstuffs have come to hand, and move off steadilists. lian breadstuffs have come to hand, and move off steadily at former rates for flour, and at a slight advance for wheat. Sales of the latter have been made at 6s. The Legislative Assembly having passed nearly all the proposed increases and additions to the specific duties list, has rendered holders of goods much more firm in their demands. The original proposal of the Colonial Treasurer has been slightly modified by the House. Flour, wheat, and printing paper have been added to been slightly modified by the House. Commercial and New Zealand were quitted at last week's rates, and Joint Stock at a decline of 2s. 6d. THE PRINCE OF WALES OFERA HOUSE,—"Elew for Blow," a very pleasing drams from the pen of Mr. Byron, was played during the first four nights of the week to moderate houses. These have been very few pieces produced here with a more effective casts. Mrs. Bleir, who took the parts of the twin sisters, Mildred and Alice, Mr. Darrell as John Drummond, and Mr. Young as Spraggs, had the heaviest share of the work, and performed it unexceptionably well. The latter kept the house in roars of laughter. Mr. Douglas, Miss Carey, Mr. Walsh, Miss Burton, Mr. Hasker, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Anderson, and others engaged rendered their characters in a pleasing manner. The farce, entitled "The Married Kake," which formed the afterpiece on each evening, enabled Mr. Douglas to law and the evening, enabled Mr. Douglas to lay an Mr. Flighty in a very creditable manner. Mrs. Flighty found a pleasing representative in Miss Granger; Miss Carey and Miss Eurton, who played Mrs. Trictrae and Susan, helped to keep the audience in great bamous. Last night, the time-honoured Adelphi play "The Green Bushes" was produced as suitable to St. Patrick's night. Mrs. Heir sustained the role of Mismil—one of her popular representations, which nover falls to attract applause. Mr. Burtlett and Mr. Young, as Jack Gong and Grinnidge, were is mirth-provoking a pair as an audience could wish to laugh about; and Miss Carey and Miss Burton, as Gerladine and Nelly, received a full share of complimentary notice. Miss Dixon played Tigerail! Mr. Wolsh, Murtogh; Mr. Douglas, George; and Mrs. Jones, Meg, in a pleasing manner. The drams was followed by a musical inclinence, which opened with the with the ballad "Brin is my home," which Mr. Skinner was called upon to reposit nearly which Mr. Skinner was called upon to reposinged the draw of the company, dressed in appropriate costume and tastefully grouped.
